"Community organizing"

Want a stronger, more active community? Community organizing is a key strategy for community development and neighborhood revitalization. It can transform the attitude and capacity of residents to control their own destiny, make good decisions and reach self-sufficiency. It can create new leaders, increase volunteerism, and improve the lives of community residents. This workshop will explore basic community organizing skills and strategies and prepare you for your first community organizing effort.

Trainer: June Otow, Hawaii Alliance for Community-Based Economic Development (HACBED)
